

Lubomir (Lubo)
LEVITSKI

Director from the Ukraine,
now based in Los Angeles and seeking representation

BIO

Born 1980 in the Ukraine, Lubomir began his career at a very young age and rose to become one of the most successful filmmakers in Eastern Europe. He's directed scores of commercials and music videos, this includes his countries largest national brands and some of the most successful recording artists in the Ukraine.

In 2004, Lubomir made his directorial debut with "The Pit", this was the very first film that featured Ukrainian actors speaking the native language. Needless to say, this film received accolades from his peers and was a big hit in his country. All prior films were either brought in from Russia or dubbed in the russian language. This films success got the attention of its then President "Viktor Yushchenko" and he asked to meet Lubomir. That meeting led to the passing of a law that made it mandatory for all films to be dubbed in the native Ukranian language. Mr. Yushchenko's goal was to promote revival of the countries native language, culture and history (see attached letter).

Next up was "The Pawnshop (fka Lombard)", this film received major financing from the State Film Agency and it too was a hit. After the success of these two films, Lubomir became the most successful and recognizable film director in the Ukraine.

Lubomir gained the respect of every major political agency in the Ukraine, including the film agencies which sought to back him and the Presidents desire to rive the film industry.

In 2013 he shattered Ukrainian box office records with "Unforgotten Shadows" which he made with his American partners. Following this in 2016 came "#Selfieparty", The success of all these films landed Lubomir in FORBES Magazine as one of the top 3 directors in the Ukraine. (2013 Ukraine edition).
